

Name: _____

Date: _____

Compound Indirect Objects Worksheet

An Indirect Object is a noun or pronoun that comes between the action verb and the direct object and tells to what or whom or for what or for whom the action of the verb is done.

There can be more than one indirect object in a sentence.

Directions: Underline the verb twice. Underline the compound indirect objects once in each sentence below.

Example A: My friend gave David and Stephen a ride home.

Answer: My friend gave David and Stephen a ride home.

1. The man looked at the pictures and paintings on the wall.
2. I spoke with my brother and sister about the vacation.
3. She gave John and Jerry the tickets to the game.
4. Dan bought the kids a ball and basket for their birthday.
5. The man bought his son and wife tickets.
6. The teacher gave her students prizes.
7. The man looked for his dog and cat in the yard.
8. The boys played football and basketball on the weekend.
9. We ran to the store and mall after school.

Answers:

1. The man looked at the pictures and paintings on the wall.
2. I spoke with my brother and sister about the vacation.
3. She gave John and Jerry the tickets to the game.
4. Dan bought the kids a ball and basket for their birthday.
5. The man bought his son and wife tickets.
6. The teacher gave her students prizes.
7. The man looked for his dog and cat in the yard.
8. The boys played football and basketball on the weekend.
9. We ran to the store and mall after school.